Purpose, passion and power

As we approach the midyear mark, three important aspects of our creative being come into focus, namely: purpose, passion and power. We have come to a point in our evolution where we are beginning to feel that without those three things (all three are inter connected) we cannot progress any further. It's as if the road that we have been walking on can't take us any further which is why many of us have been feeling stuck, helpless and unable to change the course of events around us, but desperately wanting to. Purpose, passion and power are states of being that describe the exact opposite of where we have been. If you are already living your purpose then this is an opportunity to take it deeper or to experience the joy of its discovery. Power (in the form of authentic empowerment) lets you know that you are capable of living your purpose, and purpose gives birth to passion that fills your life with creative life force and enthusiasm. It's the feeling that says I can create anything, have anything, be anything ... now what would I like to be...

The end of the road

We are at the end of a road and this needn't bring with it a sense of doom or even a sense of ending, but rather an excitement for the 'where-to-next' and the new beginnings that we are only moments away from. I say moments away because the ending and the beginning is separated only by our perception of where we are and we can change that perception in a moment. We will automatically find ourselves in a new beginning when we enter into the now and fully release ourselves from what we were holding onto, and the limitations of what we thought we were capable of. The more we cling onto the past, the familiar and what we had (even if we continue to have the same goals) the more we will find ourselves in a doom-filled place of struggle, despair and disappointment. We are at the end of a road, a path that we have walked for most of our lives has finally brought us as far as it was going to. There comes a time (like now) when we must allow for the unknown, the unexpected and we by realising that there is a part of ourselves that is totally equipped to do that; our soul has been waiting for this moment, this now ...

Our Souls desires

For so long we based our goals and ambitions, even our sense of passion and purpose on what our mind (ego) wanted. Part of the different way of being that we have entered into (that happened towards the end of May) is about realising that life simply doesn't work for us when we base it on the limitations and judgements of the ego. We cannot live from that old perspective anymore. We have entered into a state of being that allows us now to live from our Souls desires and have full access to these higher perspectives, plans and sense of purpose. Unless we make that switch we will continue to feel lost, aimless and in need of direction. No matter how exciting life is, without living from our Souls desires we cannot feel a true sense of elation or permanent fulfilment. We are waiting for something that is already here – the opportunity to engage with our inner being and to not only engage with that part of ourselves, but to realise that that is really our true identity. We don't have to look for that inner being anymore (the age old desire to find ourselves) we simply have to step out of the way enough for that inner being to find us. Realising how to make this simple shift into our Souls Truth and Souls Desire is so imperative right now that I am repeating the Souls Desire workshop at the end of June.

The Souls Desire Workshop (reminding us how to live from that perspective)

Will be held in Parkhurst, Johannesburg on the 27th of June. Please see below for further details and booking information.

SOULS DESIRE

Living the life you want at the highest levels of your own consciousness

This workshop is open to all who wish to discover the profound truth of who they are

What if you knew what your Souls Desire's were...

Would that give you new direction, higher insight or perspective in your life?

Of course!

Would it give you the knowledge that there is a greater plan at work in your life, and access to it?

Absolutely!

Would it give you the opportunity to write a new script for life, and be an active co-creator in getting what you want?

You bet!

Would it fill you with joy, would it summon every available universal support to your side, would you forever view yourself in a different light?

YES! YES! and YES!

This workshop is a paradigm shift in the way you view yourself, your Soul and all relationships within and around you.

It allows you to see the web of relationships around you as one intricate pattern that describes where you have been, and clearly illustrates where you are going to. It also gives you the tools, choices and support to create infinite new experiences. We are not limited to a destiny. When we are given the gift of seeing our destiny with the accompanying understanding of our Soul; then we have true choice – our souls choice, our souls desire, and it is that which sets us free from manifesting the desires of our ego.

We can learn how to shift control into power and enter into a new way of perceiving ourselves.
